This original piece of art, inspired by painter Diana Zoe Coop's own mountain garden interprets it in a fresh, energetic, impressionistic manner. Her use of colour and pattern is bold and intuitive, and reminiscent of early 20th century painters such as Chagall and Monet. Diana's current work reflects an interest in Japanese gardens, and their water features, and places an emphasis on seasons in the garden, as well as the diverse plant and fish life that make the garden an art form in itself. She has been honored as a biographee in the Canadian publication "Who's Who" for her contributions to the visual arts in Canada. Her working studio, Island Studio, is located on Granville Island and is open to the public by appointment. Her own garden is a source of countless ideas for her work, and was the inspiration for the painting she has donated to Rockin' for Research 2011. The Summer Garden on the Mountain, 2011 is 37" x 64" x 3", and is in a horizontal format. The medium is acrylic, liquid acrylics, inks, lustres on canvas.

Always a coveted item, this inspiring piece of art was created by young, local artists living with type 1 diabetes. Under the direction of well-known Vancouver painter Nicola Morgan, a painter, illustrator, and instructor at Arts Umbrella, these children have created a magnificent piece of original artwork titled "Soar". Each child has made a hand drawn and colored piece of art to express their hopes and dreams for a cure. An Emily Carr graduate, Nicola works with themes of the narrative as well as colour based images that express feelings of discovery. Sure to be treasured and admired, this piece of art is perfect for proud display in your home or office.

Hannah Georgas is a Vancouver-based recording artist that is dedicated to helping JDRF's mission of finding a cure for diabetes through her music. After her father's passing a few years ago due to complications of diabetes, Hannah approached JDRF wanting to make a difference. A portion of the proceeds from her first EP 'The Beat Stuff' were donated to support JDRF, and now she is excited to be sharing her talent in a song written especially for the Rockin' for Research gala. This very special song will debut as we auction off this one of a kind Dreaming of a Cure art piece. It is sure to inspire! Georgas and her 2010 debut full-length album 'This is Good' have garnered national acclaim and her full-length follow up can be expected in 2012.
